

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

Department: Department of Arts Administration, Education and Policy
Position: The Lawrence and Isabel Barnett Endowed Professor in Arts Management
Rank: Associate Professor

Description: The Ohio State University Department of Arts Administration, Education and Policy invites applications for The Lawrence and Isabel Barnett Endowed Professorship in Arts Management. We seek an associate professor of arts management whose research, teaching, and work experience demonstrate expertise within the arts management/administration field and national or international stature. The ideal candidate will have a strong interest in instruction in arts entrepreneurship and management—in the spirit of the vision of Lawrence and Isabel Barnett that we teach Art students about Business and teach Business students about managing Arts organizations. The successful applicant will teach both undergraduate and graduate courses, and take an active role as an instructor and advisor to students at all levels. The candidate will contribute to the academic life of the Department, College, and University through teaching, research, and service. An existing research agenda that reaches across traditional disciplinary boundaries is desirable, as this position offers opportunities for collaboration with faculty in other departments across the College and University, including the Fisher College of Business and John Glenn College of Public Affairs.

The Department's programs attract students with interests in arts performance/production, general administration, and business in both non-profit and commercial creative industries. This position is crucial to expanding the breadth of disciplinary expertise and programmatic offerings within the Department, whose curriculum is attracting growing student interest. The successful applicant will be expected to contribute to the following department programs: Bachelor of Arts in Arts Management, in cooperation with the Fisher College of Business; Master of Arts in Arts Policy and Administration, a joint program with the John Glenn College of Public Affairs; Undergraduate Minor in Arts Entrepreneurship; and Graduate Minor in Arts Management (proposed and under review).

Qualifications: To be competitive, applicants must demonstrate the following qualifications: PhD or equivalent in Arts Administration, Business Administration, or a related field; a teaching/publication record that is national/international in scope; expertise in the arts management/administration field; and a demonstrated record of innovative and experimental approaches to education. Appointment is contingent on the university's verification of credentials and other information required by law and/or university policies, including but not limited to a criminal background check.

About the Department of Arts Administration, Education, and Policy and OSU: The Department of Arts Administration, Education, and Policy at The Ohio State University is recognized for the distinction of its programs; the research, teaching, and service accomplishments of its world-class faculty; and the diversity and aptitude of its outstanding students and alumni. Arts Administration, Education, and Policy faculty are internationally distinguished for an interdisciplinary body of research in such areas as cultural policy; philanthropy and the arts; arts advocacy; public policy; creative economic development; arts and cultural entrepreneurship; arts administration and management; cultural program design, implementation, and evaluation; community arts organizations; museum studies; contemporary theory and philosophy; disability studies; gender studies; sexuality studies; American Indian Studies; critical race theory; critical multicultural art education; community-based art education; visual culture studies; service learning; teacher preparation, semiotics; material culture; arts-based research and narrative inquiry; phenomenological studies of teaching/learning experience; and art criticism. Our curricular offerings include the BAE (Bachelor of Art Education), BA in Arts Management, MA in Art Education, MA in Arts Policy and Administration, and the Ph.D. in Arts, Administration, Education and Policy. Ph.D. students specialize in Art Education, Cultural Policy and Arts Management, or Museum Education and Administration.
